COMMITTEE INSIGHT

We asked our committees “What’s on the horizon for our industry in 2025?” here are some of our favourites!

ASSET MANAGEMENT - NAVIGATING UNCERTAINTY

“I think we are looking at a continued period of uncertainty with some retailers doing well, others not and the same applying to shopping locations. The greater certainty of the new UK government may well be offset by the global uncertainty generated by the change in administration in the US meaning household budgets and discretionary spend may continue to come under pressure.

Although there appears to be some greater interest from investors driven by perceived value i.e. values are low enough to get their attention however whether sellers and buyers aspirations will converge is yet to be seen. The ‘buy it cos it’s cheap’ mentality does not however address the long term issues.

Every location needs a clear long term strategy. This approach can be helped with owners such as Local Authorities willing to take a long term view however they often seem reluctant to spend what is needed to put a comprehensive strategy in place. Long term investors need to accept that in order to make their investment a success they need to understand the worth in the short term investment needed to have the right people to devise the strategy and accept there will be some short term pain.”

ESG – COMMUNITY-CENTRIC RETAIL

“The most successful centres will be focussed on the whole community, thinking about those who do not visit as well as those who do. Through continued investment and diversified leasing, these centres better reflect the neighbourhoods they are in and grow unique visitors, frequency and average spend per visit. Creating spaces people want to spend time in for a variety of reasons, and delivering rent growth for landlords.”

MARKETING – THE YEAR OF THE MARKETER

“Property has long lagged behind retail in our ability to understand the customer journey from end to end: knowing who our customers are, what messages they respond to, how effective a campaign has been and connecting marketing spend to transaction value. That changes in 2025, I think the focus will shift to owners of places prioritising ROI on marketing spend, optimising the experience messaging to target the most valuable customers and to measuring impact.

Alongside a more rigorous approach to marketing spend landlords will also start to own the customer more, building their own single customer views, bespoke segmentations and loyalty programs that all focus on customer retention and growing engagement.

2025 is the year of the marketer!”

REPURPOSING & REGENERATION – BRIDGING THE GAP

“Continued challenges around viability for town centre regeneration. Need for clarity about government financial support to help bridge viability gap and support local authorities in delivering regeneration. Need to ensure town centres are not forgotten on the government agenda, with focus on housing building often geared towards new settlements / greenfield. Starting to see delivery on the post Covid early town centre regeneration schemes – opportunities to learn lessons and see regeneration and repurposing in action.”

PROPERTY MANAGEMENT – COLLABORATION & COMMUNICATION

“More collaboration and communication between landlord and tenant as we await the new version of the RICS Professional Standard for service charges in commercial property, as well as landlord and tenant working together for data capture on utilities, and environmental data.”

REVO HUB – SEAMLESS TECH, SUSTAINABILITY, AND CONSUMER-CENTRIC INNOVATION

- In-store technology – more and more places invest in in-store tech to make the customer experience as smooth as possible including self check out, virtual try ons and AI-driven assistance with shopping.
- Augmented and Virtual Reality to enhance customer experience
- Sustainability remains of great importance to consumers who are increasingly demanding transparency in sourcing and sustainability. retailers will be aiming to adopt eco friendly practices such as recyclable packaging.
- In '25 the retailers will be aiming to make shopping more convenient, engaging, and aligned with consumers' values.

REVO SCOTLAND – BUILDING RESILIENT URBAN CENTRES

“The sustained period of reducing demand for retail space over the last decade or so has been painful but it has led to positive moves to rebalance urban centres by (re) introducing other uses. The introduction of homes, hospitality, cinemas, workplace, etc continues to create greater resilience, extended periods of activity and safety in our centres; this, in turn, reinforces and supports retail. We are seeing the positive effects of this healthy mix on the retail industry and this has, in some part, helped stimulate a retail ‘bounce back’ in some locations (mainly large city centres). There is a danger of thinking ‘it’s all sorted’ and back to ‘business as usual’ and there seems a greater level of short term thinking and quick financial returns approach in the industry. It will be important to keep our ‘eyes on the prize’ and keep striving to develop layered, rich and poly cultural urban centres rather than accidentally slip back into total retail dominance. Otherwise we will have failed to grasp the opportunity to create town and city centres that truly meet the needs of their communities.”

SAFETY & SECURITY – WELCOMING MARTYN’S LAW

“The welcoming of Martyn’s Law which will deliver, for the first time globally, a mandatory security standard. Shopping centres and public event spaces will be safer for this but it will mean that people skills, operational processes and technology will need to be reviewed and made fit for purpose.”

2024 REVO CONFERENCE & VILLAGE AT COMPLETELY RETAIL MARKETPLACE

Introduction:

On the 24th September 2024, over 2,200 retail property professionals attended the Completely Retail Marketplace and Revo Conference & Village - the fourth time we have collaborated on this event.

Under the expert guidance of Vivienne King, the focus was on Retail & Leisure Places and Spaces Reinvented, which set the stage for a dynamic exploration of the future of retail and leisure. The day was brimming with valuable networking opportunities, engaging discussions, and insights into industry developments.

A special shoutout goes to our fantastic host, Vivienne King, and our keynote speaker, Oliver Shah, Associate Editor and Leader Writer at The Sunday Times, whose insights set the tone for the day. I was delighted to witness a diverse attendance from the industry, the Revo’s provide a platform for all to shine and take centre stage. It was fantastic to see onsite FM teams, tech solutions and key workers championed and winning awards alongside big corporations. A great event and look forward to returning for years to come.”

TESTIMONIALS

"Throughout the last 30 years of my career, Revo has been an invaluable forum for networking and learning. The majority of contacts and friends I have in the industry I have met through Revo and the ongoing activity helps reinforce these valuable relationships. Revo has also been a great platform to allow me to promote our company and our ideas to a large and extremely relevant audience. The long history of conferences, dinners and socials are a string of fond memories, and the wide-ranging programme of activities continue to deliver value to me and my colleagues."

Alan Anthony, Managing Director & Architect, Threesixty Architecture

"Zest first attended one of Revo's events with Retail Destination in Feb 2023; we had such a warm welcome from Revo and found the event extremely valuable. We joined the community and have attended numerous events since. Our network has grown and we have built strong relationships through Revo and with Revo. Zest commissioned CACI to undertake research into the value of EV charging in retail and later in 2023 we hosted a breakfast event with Revo and CACI presenting such results; none of this would have happened without the platform & the members within. We look forward to further success, building new partnerships and to 2024's amazing events!"

Lucy Matthews, Strategic Partnership Manager, Zest

"Being a Revo Hub member has been great for my career in commercial real estate. The access to industry events, tours, and networking activities has been brilliant. From insightful conferences and panel discussions to exclusive property tours, Revo Hub provides valuable knowledge and hands-on experiences. The networking opportunities have been invaluable, allowing me to forge meaningful connections with industry leaders. For any professional looking to stay ahead in the industry and unlock new opportunities, I highly recommend Revo Hub."

Sabrina Stephens, Senior Account Manager, Be Wonder

“The retail sector has a significant influence on global sustainability. From material decisions of fashion product manufacturers to localised waste strategies of regional shopping centres, Revo provides the opportunity to understand and contribute to a multitude of sustainability issues. During my time with Revo I have been fortunate enough to spend some time on the Scottish Committee and the ESG Committee. Membership and participation have led to very useful insights and contributions to questions around sustainable development and sustainable retail practices. This has included chairing a round table with the Department for Business, Energy & Industrial Strategy. Given the breadth and depth of the Retail Community, Revo offers a great platform from which members can learn and positively influence the sector.”

David Cameron, Director, Atelier Ten

“Revo Hub has given me great opportunities to meet the future leaders of the retail and mixed-use property industry while the events and tours have been really insightful, providing a rare peek into how places and spaces are designed, delivered and operated and what makes them successful.”

Grigor Grigorov, Architect & Partner, Make Architects

“Turley is a longstanding Revo member and joined the Repurposing and Regeneration Committee several years ago. The experience has been brilliant. We have been able to collaborate on so many great initiatives and the network it opened up to us has been invaluable to our business.”

Andrea Arnall, Director, Turley

“The future of retail needs to be more than just a space for transactions but instead it needs to be focused on the physical, social and community experience and developing sustainable mixed-use environments is key to achieving this. The renewed focus of Revo and an invitation to join Revo’s ESG Committee is the ideal opportunity to make this happen.

As a Director at Chapman Taylor, I can call upon our 50 years of Award-winning Experience in this Sector and intertwine it with our wider mixed-use expertise across multiple sectors to inform these mixed uses spaces. Shopping Centres have a big part to play in the future of our Towns and Cities and to remain relevant must also be both environmentally and socially sustainable. Good Design and Guidance from Revo Committee members can inform and nurture this placemaking to deliver a long-term socially and economically sustainable development.”

Nick Thursby, Director, Chapman Taylor

“Revo Hub provides a platform for young people in the retail industry to grow their network, socialise with likeminded people and to be part of the discussion. In a nutshell, Revo Hub gives the opportunity to grow your network and support your career. “

Natalie Mylroie, Director, JLL

“The whole team here at Toolbox Marketing benefits from being members of the Revo community. Those who are members of Revo Hub find the study tours and the strategic insights valuable in building their knowledge of the industry and providing them an opportunity to network with other young professionals. While those of us who sit on the committees enjoy being a part of the thought leadership discussions with like-minded peers to shape the future of industry.”

The Team, Toolbox Marketing

“I’ve been a member of the Revo Scotland Committee now for a number of years. This has offered me the opportunity to widen my understanding of the complex nature of the ever-evolving markets that we work in. It has also allowed me to mix with a diverse group of experts which has not only be insightful, but great fun. I’d encourage anyone with an interest in real estate to get involved in some capacity with Revo.”

Stuart Moncur, Director – Head of National Retail, Savills UK
